Evening language programme 2024/25

Course title: French DELF A2 exam preparation course - online

Course descriptor/objectives

This course is focussed on developing oral and written comprehension and expression in order to facilitate success in the DELF A2 exam.

Students will practise the four skills and will get used to the methodology of the exam with an accredited examiner. Participants will be asked to complete exercises at home every week to consolidate their progress in class.

Language-specific information:

French is spoken as an official language in 29 countries and has over 300 million speakers worldwide. It is an important language for intercultural communication, acting as one of the 6 working languages of the United Nations.

As a romance language, modern French is derived from Vulgar Latin, though it resembles its counterparts (Italian, Portuguese and Spanish) much less due to Germanic influences.

Culturally, French opens speakers up to a wide range of modern and established classics such as the cinema of Jean-Luc Goddard and Jacques Tati or the literary greatness of Victor Hugo and Proust.

Prerequisite:

This non-credit bearing weekly course is intended for language learners who are already working at A2 level.
